Managing Director, APRU World Institute
Director, Center for International Business
Education and Research, Marshall School of Business
University of Southern California

Dr. Drobnick has a joint appointment with the University of Southern California and the National University of Singapore and the Association of Pacific Rim Universities (APRU), which maintains its Secretariat at NUS. Drobnick is the Managing Director of the APRU World Institute (www.apru.org/awi), an institute founded in 2006 to produce interdisciplinary research on issues of critical importance to Pacific Rim policy makers and is a Visiting Professor of Global Studies at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy at the National University of Singapore. Drobnick is also the Secretary General Emeritus and a member of the Steering Committee of the Association of Pacific Rim Universities (APRU), the association of presidents of 37 leading Pacific Rim research universities.

At the University of Southern California, Drobnick is the director of the Center for International Business Education and Research, which has been supported by the U.S. Department of Education since 1990, as one of its 31 national resource centers on international business. This center is in the Marshall School of Business, where Drobnick is a Research Professor of Management and Organization. From 1994-2005, Drobnick served as USC's Vice Provost for International Affairs.

Drobnick specializes in Pacific Rim economic and business issues and U.S. and Pacific Rim trade policies. He is the author of numerous articles regarding international economics and business, as well as the co-author of Neither Feast nor Famine: Food Conditions to the Year 2000 (D.C. Heath, 1978) and co-editor of Small Firms in Global Competition (Oxford University Press, 1994).

Drobnick is a vice chairman and a director of the United States National Committee of the Pacific Economic Cooperation Council (PECC), a member of the Executive Committee of the United States Asia Pacific Council, a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Pacific Council on International Policy, a director of the Japan-America Society of Southern California, and a member of the Advisory Council of the Asia Society's Southern California Center.
